

Cluster formation in nuclear systems

Professor Gerd Roepke

Institute of Physics, Rostock University, Germany

Abstract

To describe cluster formation in nuclear matter at subsaturation densities, in-medium modifications have to be taken into account. A cluster mean-field theory is discussed and compared with other approaches. Consequences for nuclear structure, heavy ion reactions and astrophysical applications are discussed.